ANDALUZ THE ARTIST

Efren Andaluz III, better known as Andaluz The Artist, was born on October 8, 1986 in Queens, NY. Growing up in the cultural melting pot of Richmond Hill Queens. Being half Dominican and half Ecuadorian his latino upbringing focused on family and work ethic. A major part of growing up in Queens was the influence of Hip-Hop culture. Andaluz would wake up to the muffled bass sounds emitting from his uncle's room when his uncle was producing instrumentals. This love for Hip-Hop was further nourished by his fondness of the graffiti tagged walls in his neighborhood.

Graffiti, one of the four elements of HipHop, would play a major part in his future art style. His grandfather, Efren Andaluz, was also an artist and would teach him different drawing techniques and buy him art books.

Inspired by Saturday morning cartoons and superheroes, young Andaluz III would start putting what his grandfather taught him into practice sketching his favorite characters.

Both sides of Andaluz's family were very talented creatives but none would make it a career. At 10 years old, Andaluz and his parents would move him and his brother to the starkly different suburbs of Long Island. Everything he knew had changed including the way his peers thought and looked at him. Here he had a difficult time adjusting and making friends, he was an outcast. Instead of hanging out with friends he would stay inside and sketch, creating comic books and honing his drawing abilities. By the time Andaluz was a senior in high school, his parents bought him an airbrush kit. He taught himself how to use the airbrush and quickly started taking orders from his classmates. Painting their t-shirts, sneakers and even designing whole outfits for different school clubs. This is when he realized he could make money from his passion. Since then, Andaluz started his own company “On Da Loose Designs” located in East Northport, N.Y. where he helps startup companies with branding, logos, social media concepts. In 2014, Efren established himself as Andaluz The Artist. The first artist to paint while rapping. He built his following from performing live on his youtube channel and getting his videos on blogging media sites like 50 cent’s thisis50.com, MTV.

com and BET.com. In 2016 Andaluz painted 151 pokemon on the side of his then utilized building in Huntington NY during the pokemon-go app craze. The story went viral once the Associated Press picked it up and sent it to news media outlets throughout the world. Some of those outlets include NBC, CBS, FOX and WPIX. Andaluz then began to focus on large murals and art for galleries.

Andaluz art focuses on a story through colorful collage-like imagery. He combines his knowledge of realism, pop art, portraiture and graffiti to create his pieces. Using mediums such as oil paint, spray paint, airbrushes and acrylics to produce his art, people often think a group of artists collaborated to produce such a piece due to the sheer diversity of styles. When it comes to versatility, Andaluz takes the cake. If you're looking for an artist that can paint live at events, create media attraction, perform and touch on worldly issues Andaluz is your guy.

GOD IN THE BASS

David Solomon Holder aka Dbass

David Soloman's musical family made him take piano lessons before he could learn drums like his uncle. After piano lessons he taught himself percussion drums and bass in highschool. After graduating valedictorian from highschool, he went to Five Towns College, During his sophomore year Mr Soloman joined 'Focus', his first original band that played much of NYC's open mic circuit with Jermaine Paul. Mr Soloman finished school in 07' with an associate's degree in music performance and a bachelors in music composition. David Soloman has been in cover bands, notably Radio Riot where he played bass, sang lead and background. He's played the tristate area clubs, bars, corporate events, weddings etc. Also more recently he was in Entourage Band aboard the Discover 2 Cruise ship for 5 months, playing and singing lead 7 days a week with plenty of time for him to tour clubs in France, Spain, Columbia, and Jamaica. After all these experiences Soloman has realized, “I have my own voice that I need to express through my music.” He looks forward to releasing his first song, an uplifting single named “Cool Winning” this spring. He will be starting remote music theory lessons and starting his band in Orlando 2021!
